Norman Smith Architecture, an award-winning, Washington, DC and Virginia based architectural firm, is pleased to announce that one of it's recent projects, the Laser/Davies Residence, has been chosen by HGTV for it's well-known television show, Bang for Your Buck, Season 3. The show is scheduled for broadcast in January, 2010.

Bang for Your Buck looks for projects that maximize design value and impact within a budget and considers how smart remodeling decisions can make for good investments in your home. On this project, according to architect Norman Smith,

"I emphasized the distinction between simply adding space and actually designing space that integrates into and complements the house; this is particularly true for a small house and a modest budget, where the spaces need to be carefully considered to maximize their programmatic, and just as importantly, their aesthetic value."

The Laser/Davies Residence was also featured in the Summer 2007 edition of Architecture DC.

Norman Smith Architecture specializes in custom single-family residential, multi-family residential and small to mid-sized mixed use architectural projects as well as custom furniture and cabinetry design. The firm also offers turn-key design-build services through it's affiliation with Taurus Renovation and Construction as well as fabrication abilities through it's long-term association with well-known, sustainable fabricators such as JMG Associates. The firm's staff contains LEED AP® personnel and the firm has also assisted TDG and the Green Builders Council of WDC with Weatherization Training Curricula.
